Question 4 of 5

Question 4:

Person A:

I visited there last summer, and I also really enjoy watching the street performances that the city organizes. It adds a vibrant and entertaining element to my travel experience, and I feel immersed in the local atmosphere. I planned to buy some souvenirs, but at the end of the trip, I ran out of money, which I deeply regret.

Person B:

When I visit a new place, I tend to spend a bit more on shopping because I believe memorable experiences are worth it. I enjoy treating myself to delicious food, whether trying local specialties or dining at popular restaurants, as it allows me to explore the local cuisine. Buying souvenirs also reminds me of the unique experiences and culture I encountered during my journey.

Person C:

Personally, I thought the city's public transport was really good. It was easy to use, efficient, and well-organized. It made getting around and exploring different areas of the city a breeze. It also relieved my worry about walking too much during my trip. I realized the importance of taking care of my feet and not pushing myself too hard. This way, I could enjoy my trip without feeling uncomfortable or tired.

Person D:

I don't generally go to big cities, as I prefer staying in one area of the city to fully experience the local culture and attractions. I enjoy destinations that feature natural resorts, where I can relax and appreciate the beauty of nature. This way, I can escape the fast pace of city life and truly connect with my surroundings.
